Mayweather-Hatton: The odds keep changing Share via IN his most experienced opponent yet, Bernard “The Gypsy King” Hatton has the chance to show why he is the first Briton to win a world title, as Mayweather looks to retain his unbeaten record. Hatton’s 19th fight is an explosive encounter in which his skills as a counter puncher will be showcased against Mayweather’s sublime skills as a boxer, while the unpredictability of his entertaining “Shake and Bake” style means that it is never too early to place bets. Mayweather’s records: He has been warned for: two (for throwing punches), nine (for low blows and shoulder-checking), two (for biting), one (for low blows), and three (for holding).
Sperm-specific antigen 19S is a sperm specific proacrosin homolog. Proacrosin is a proprotein derived from the pro-lactogenin alpha-subunit in the anterior pituitary. It can be proteolytically processed in the male reproductive tract to yield acrosin. In this paper, the expression of a novel proacrosin-like protein of 19S in the testis was characterized. Both in the rat and human testis, the 19S protein is expressed in the nucleus and cytoplasm of spermatogonia and spermatocytes, but the expression in round spermatids is restricted to the perinuclear region of haploid nuclei. A sperm-specific promoter was localized to the proximal part of the gene. The proacrosin-like protein is synthesized by germ cells in vitro and may be involved in acrosome formation during the acrosome reaction. The absence of a signal peptide suggests that it is not secreted from the cells and thus may have 2d92ce491b
