will be somewhere between about 15 and about 40 bps by the end of 2008. Let's look at why growth in the economy is as strong as it is right now, and why I think it will be well into the double digits by the end of 2008. First, there is probably no better economic argument today for why we are entering a housing recession than the prospect of a housing depression. Last Friday, there were over 300,000 Americans who filed for unemployment insurance because they lost their jobs and aren't yet back at work. That's a number just shy of one out of every five people who have lost their jobs in the past 6 months. That number was well over 1 in 10 just six months ago. The number of
